NO MERCY FOR COLONIZERS.

DETECTIVES ARE HOT ON THE TRAIL OF CROOKED WOULD-BE VOTERS.

Inspector Byrnes Has Uttered His Flat and Vigorous Work Will Be Done-Capt. Cassidy's New Methods in the Wicked Eighth District-A Little Plan of John I.

Inspectors Steers, Williams and Conlin are watching the registration very closely, and captains have been instructed to make a vigilant survey of lodging and tenement houses in their precincts, and to secure a list of all lodgers from the register.

Detectives are to be put on the track of all suspected colonizers or repeaters, and arrests will be made promptly in case of a false registration.

Inspector Williams said to-day: "Depend upon it that the police will take care that no illegally registered voters cast a ballot. We shall know precisely how many bona-fide voters there are in every lodging-house, and how many 'floaters' have come in. These floaters are for sale to the highest bidder, and we will do the knocking down work usually left to an auctioneer." John I. Davenport, Chief Supervisor of

John I. Davenport, Chief Supervisor of Election and whose exploits in former years have drawn down upon him the condemna-tion of the press, has been a regular visitor to Police Headquarters lately, making Presi-dent French his confidant. Mr. Davenport's latest dodge was to have Messrs. French and McClave tried to have the Board instruct the captains to do this work, but Commissioners Voorhis and MacLean objected, and it failed by a tie vote.

Charman Anson Holcomb, of the Lewis County Committee, reports a remarkable revolution of sentiment in favor of the Administration, and says that his poll lists show that Cleveland and Thurman will carry that county, which has always given Republican majorities varying from 600 to 900.

Chairman J. Clyde Johnson also sends words of good cheer from that Republican stronghold, Cayuga County, the home of Gen. Jno. N. Knapp. of the Republican State Executive Committee.

The Democratic factional fight is ended there, as it is in almost every part of the State, and a gain of from 200 to 300 votes for Cleveland is certain.

It is thought that the hour of trouble has only been postponed, and that an effort will be made at a later meeting to secure Mr. Hewitt's indorsement when the friends of Sheriff Grant are present in less numbers than they were last night.

"If they do indorse Hewitt," said a prominent supporter of Grant in the Club, "there will be two Democratic clubs in Harlem in no time. Hewitt's friends should see that such an indorsement would do no good, and only render the opposition to him more bitter."

They say he can't land, so what shall he do? He is a Chinaman, and he is in the custody of an officer from the Custom-House on the steamer Ludgate Hill in from London and now lying at Woodruff's dock, Brooklyn.

This is the first time a Chinaman has attempted to land in New York since the Chinese Exclusion bill became a law.

landed in New York, and he says he has looked upon this city as his home since that time.

He insists that he has served in the American Navy for some time and has been employed as a cook on board vessels at various times since he came to this country. He has a brother who keeps a boarding-house at 62 Cherry street, this city, where he has lived.

Last year Ah Sing shipped aboard the St. John and made a trip to San Francisco via the Horn.

From there he went to Hong Kong, thence to London, and from the latter place he has just come, having circumnavigated the globe.

The exclusion law is something new and starting to Ah Sing. He has not eaten anything since he heard about it, and he flourishes his passport and discharge papers in a wild way, keeping up an incoherent jabber all the white.

The officer who is keeping guard over him said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

"I don't know what will become of poor Ah Sing if he is not allowed to land. He has set his heart on seeing New York again, and acts almost crazy when talking about it.

"He tells me that he does not expect to stay here long, because he wants to ship aboard another boat from here and go to sea again."

CAPT. M'CULLAGH'S POSITION IN THE FLACCOMIO MURDER CASE.

But There Are Many Who Belleve that the Mystery of That Open Street Tragedy Is as Deep as Ever-A Lack of Motive Shown So Far as Facts Go, Even Allowing that the Murderer Is Caught.

Police Capt. McCullagh was more positive than ever this morning that he had the murderer of Antonio Flaccomio in custody, and told an Evening World reporter who called upon him that he expected to be able to prove this fact conclusively within the next twenty-four hours. Just how this was to be done he would not say, and all efforts to draw the good-natured Captain out and induce him to disclose some of his clues were unavailing.

The fact that he and his detectives have already been working hard for four days on the case without definite result, when five or six people claim to have seen the crime committed and have given descriptions of the mitted and have given descriptions of the murderer, has given rise to no little merriment in certain quarters, and the Captain seems rather nettled about some of the comments that have been made.

It was learned, however, that one of the new clues was information given by Albert Weber, the young German cook in the Hanover Hotel. Detective Bisser, went to see the young man this morning and made arrangements to have him call upon the Captain at the station this afternoon.

rangements to have him call upon the Captain at the station this afternoon.

The weak point in Weber's story is that, according to his own statement, he did not see the faces of the two Italians, and could give no idea of the looks of the taller of the two, who is supposed to have done the stabbing. Although he was less than three paces distant when he saw the tall man wrench his left arm from Flaccomio's right and start off at a rapid pace down St. Mark's place towards Second avenue has only saw his back and Second avenue, he only saw his back, and could not even say whether he had a stiletto in his hand or not.

This led to the theory of suicide which was

This led to the theory of suicide which was advanced, I ut soon exploded.

Weber told a reporter of THE EVENING World his morning that he did not believe he could identify the man, whom he has already described as a tall, sparely built person with a light brown overcoat or give any more definite description of him.

This description would fit Sabatino more accurately than any of the other suspected persons now in the custody of the police, and Capt. McCullagh may be banking heavily on what he expects to get out of Weber, for he still claims that Sabatino is the guilty one. It is said, however, that the other three members of the dinner party at "La Trinacria" who, it was intimated, would probably be arrested to-day, would add to the proof which the Captain aiready has in possession, and in fact complete the chain of evidence against the suspected prisoner. On this point and in fact complete the chain of evidence against the suspected prisoner. On this point the Captain refused to give any information.

The theory is that the knife which was found on the sidewalk could not have been the weapon with which Flaccomio was stabbed, but that his adversary carried in his left hand, which he held in his overcoat pocket, a very sharp stiletto, which he plunged into Flaccomio's heart when he suddenly withdrew his arms and gave the former the shove which Weber noticed.

On the supposition that Sabatino is really the murderer there appears to be nothing in

On the supposition that Sabatino is really the murderer there appears to be nothing in the possession of the police which can show any adequate motive for such a crime. So far as can be learned the two men had never been on unfriendly terms, and, in fact, had very little to do with each other.

Under these circumstances it is thought by many that the solution of the mystery in which the whole case is shrouded is as far off

New York Girl's Terrible Death from a Long Island Railroad Train.

BARYLON, L. I., Oct. 18.—A young woman of prepossessing appearance, who was a passenger on the Sag Harbor express on the Long sland Railroad, killed herself last night by leaping from the train while it was going at full speed, about a mile beyond the Islip

It is believed that the girl threw herself from the platform with the intention of committing suicide, although some say that she lost her balance and fell accidentally while passing from one car to another. She was entirely alone on the train, and her manner attracted no attention from the other passencers during the trip.

attracted no attention from the other passengers during the trip.

The train was stopped as soon as the accident occurred, but when she was reached life was extinct. She had struck a heavy log by the side of the track, and her neck was broken, death being instantaneous.

From articles found upon her person it was ascertained that her name was Delia Dandercan, and it was believed that she came from New York. What her destination was the conductor who had taken up the tickets could not remember. The body is at Islip still, awaiting further identification.

The latter looked bright and cheerful. His hair and mustache, of the glossiest black, had evidently received the recent and careful attention of a barber. He was accompanied by his brother Charles and a young man who was said to be a relative.

Bedell was wanted as a witness for the plaintiffs in the case of his former employers, Shipman, Barlow, Laroque & Choate, against the Bank of the State of New York, to recover the money which Bedell obtained through his crookedness.

Bedell created a sensation last Thursday by refusing to answer a single question out to tions on a Big Scale. In Jersey City this morning Detective Dal ton arrested Thomas Boylan, a river junkman, Patrick Mahon and William H. Shope, These three chartered a tug during Monday night, stole a McMahon Transportation Company barge, and transported it, with it lead, eighty tons of red ash coal, valued at $800. They had planned to finish their job.

The thieves sold the coal partially in Jersey City and the rest in New York. Some of it has been recovered from people who were innocent of the fact that it was stolen. The police captains were summoned to Head quarters this morning and got instructions as to

"What do you think will be the result of your running for the office?"
"I consider myself something of a prophet but I can't tell what the result of my running will be. I shall make speeches, if halls can be gotten without paying ten times the price for them that is usually demanded. I think Mayor Hewitt should withdraw, now that I am to run. He doesn't take as much interest in the city as he does in his mills.
"Now old Peter Cooper would have made a great Mayor, which Hewitt certainly is not, I would not appoint women to all the municipal offices in case of my election. I shall distribute them equally between the women and the men. Many women are not educated up to this."

"I wouldn't turn any body out of office for party reasons," continued Mrs. Leonard.
"nor would I make judges from brewers! I am a temperance advocate, but not a Prohibitionist. I could get more halls if I were."

"Well, you will have to hustle, Mrs. Leonard," said the reporter, sympathetically.
"There isn't much time."

"But we don't take as much time as the men to do things. We go ahead without so much fuss."

"Don't have to buy up votes and get men drunk," interjected Miss Leonard, the candidate's daughter, sarcustically, interrupting her meditation over a new polonaise in a fashion plate she had in her lap.

"We would do more for the men than they do for us," said Mrs. Leonard in a heaping-coals-of-fire-on-their-head tone. "We have a motherly feeling for them. I have no fight with them."

mrs.Leonard said this with a touch of light disdain. She by no means implied that a man Mayor's efficiency could outstrip a woman Mayor.

"What are your views about the conduct of the Mayoralty?" inquired the reporter.

"Every city is its own household and it should be run as one. This city is under the control of Albany and is ruled by the Legislature. I would have a city take control of the public means of transportation, such as horsecars. It ought to control gas works and other things of that kind just as much as it does the public schools and the Post-Office. I would like it to control the sale of coal, and not let it be raised and bothered with by the coal barons. I wouldn't have any evictions. Houses that would be condemned as untenantable in Chicago they drive tenants out of here if they fail to pay a month's rent. I would have a patrol wagen and not let crowds of people trail after an officer who had arrested a possibly innocent person.

"Then I would have lodging-houses and restaurants run by the city for the benefit of the public who are in poorer circumstances."
